Dear Parents

We held some Maths Workshops for parents at the end of last term and we are holding a repeat session for those of you who missed it (or would like to attend again!) on Friday 8 March at 9.00 am.

At the workshop we will be sharing some of the calculation methods taught in school and looking at the school’s calculation policy. Methods change over time and parents often express that they fear that they will confuse their child if they use methods that they themselves used at school!

We will also discuss how learning basic skills is so important, how best to support your child at home and how to have fun with maths.

By attending the workshop, we hope that you will feel more confident when supporting your child with their maths homework or when discussing their school work in general. There will be the opportunity for you to ask questions also.

Yours Sincerely,

Joe Jagger and Sue Clarke (Maths Coordinators)
